Practice sometimes makes a per fect misance.

As we advance in life we learn the limits of our abilities.-Frodue.

Men are deceived about nothing so much as about their motives.

Sign-boards are good during the journey. It is the art of life not to carry them about after the journey. Truth is moral dynamite: can be put down safely enough but can be thrown flown only with an explosion.

CHAPTER V.

There had been a morning of jubilee in the camp of the Fifth Sepurate brigade, and a row in the tents of the reguiars. Up to within a fortnight such a state of affairs would have been considered abnormal, for the papers would have it that the former were on the verge of dissolution through plague, pestilence and famine due to the neg-lect of officials vaguely referred to as "the military authorities," or "the staff," while up to the coming of Canker to command sweet accord had relgned in the regular brigade, and the volunteers looked on with envy. But now a great martial magnate had praised the staiwart citizen soldiery whom he had passed in review early in the duy, and set them to shouting by the arnouncement that, as reward for their hard work and assiduous drill, they should have their heart's degire and be shipped across the seas to far Manlla. It had all been settied beforehand at headquarters. The "chief" had known for four days that that particular command would be selected for the next expedition, but it tickied "the boys" to have it put that way, and the home papers would make so much of lt. So there was singing and triumph and rejoicing all nlong the eastern verge of a rocky, roughly paved cross street, and rank blaspheny across the way. To the seandal and sorrow of the -teenth Infantry some of the recent robberies had been traced to their very coors. A commissary sergeant had "weakened," n cartman hail squealed end one of the most popular and attractive young soldiers in the whole command was now a prisoner in the guardhouse charged with criminal knowledge of the whole affair, and of being a large reciplent of the lil-gotten ce, a private in company K.

What made it worse was the aliegation that several others, non-commissloned officers and "special duty men," were mixed up in the matter, and Canker had rasped the whole commissioned force present for duty in his lecture upon the subject and had almost Intlmated that officers were conniving at the concealment of the gullt of their sergeants rather than have it leak out that the felony was committed ln a company of their commanding.

He and Gordon had had what was described as a "red-hot" row, ail because Gordon flatly declared that while something was queer about the case of the yning clerk, he'd bet his bottom dollar he wasn't a thlef. Canker sald anch language was a reflection on himself, as he had personally investigated Infred he had made out a case against returned to camp. Gordon asked if he to. Gordon said he had-he had talked with the lad fully and freely on his o'clock, and was greatly Impressed with his story-as would anyone else be who heard it. Canker reddened still more und said he wouldn't ailow ofdeers to Interview prisoners without "I'll prefer charges aguinst the next that does it," said he. And not three hours later, Mr. Billy Gray, sprawling on his camp cot, striv Ing to forget the sorrow of the earlier morning, and to memorize a page of suddenly accosted by an orderly who stood at the front of the tent, scratching at the tent flap-the camp subst!-

"A note for the lieutenant," said he, darting in and then darting out, possibiy fearful of question. It was a queer note:

"I am a total stranger to you, but f wore in hrighter days the badge of the same so-cleip that was yours at the university. Three of the fraternity are in my company—one is on guard and he urged me to write at once to you. They know me to be a brother thair steam though they are not tell. brother Delt, even though I dare not tell my real name. What I have to say is that the charge against me is utterly false, as I can convince you, but could not con-vince a court. I am confined at the moment of all others in my life when it ta mos vitally important that I should be free. Grant me ten minutes' interview this afternoon and if I do not prove myself guitless I will ark no favor-but when I do con vince you, de as you would be done by. "Yours in A Z X,

"GEORGE MORTON."

"Weli, I'il he blessed!" said Mr. Gray, is he roiled out of his gruy blanket. "Here's a state of things! Listen to this, captain," he called to his company commander in the adjoining tent. "Here's Morton, back from 48 hours" absence without leave, brought back by armed guard after sharp resist nnce, charged with Lord knows what ail, wants to tell me his story and prove his Innocence."

"You let him alone," growled his senior. "Remember what Cauker said, or you'll go in arrest. What call has Morton on you, I'd like to know?" The fad flushed. Fraternity was a very sacred thing in the A Z X. It was "the most exclusive crowd at the 'varsity." Its membership was pledged to one another by unusual ties. It was the hardest society for a fellow to get into in any one of the seven colleges whereat it flourished, and its mystic bonds were not shaken off with the silken gown and "mortar hoard" of undergraduate days, but followed its membership through many a maturer year. It was a society most college men might ask to join in vain. Moncy, social station, influence were poweriess. Not until a student had been under observation two whole years and was thoroughly known could be hope for a bid" to become a "Deita Sig." until another six months of probation could be sport its colors, and not until he formally withdrew from its fobl, in post graduation years, could be con sider himself absolved from its mibl obligations. But the boast of the "Deita Sig" had ever been that no one of its membership had ever turned a deaf ear to a fellow in seed of aid. Who of lts originators ever dreamed of such a thing as its drifting into and becoming a factor in the affairs of the regular army?

No wonder Gray shool for a moment, the paper still in his hands, irresolute, even disturbed. Not to answer the appeal meant to run counter to all the tencts of his fraternity. To answer might mean arrest and court-martial for deliberate disobolience of orders, tanker has no more mercy than an Indian. It was barely 48 hours since he had been publicly warned by an experienced old captain that he would flui me "guardian angel" in Squeers. It would seriously mar his prospects to start now with Sources "down on him," and us that lynx-cycl commander was ever on watch for infractions of orders, Billy well knew that he could not hope to see and talk with the prisoner and tanker not hear of it. To ask permission of Canker would only make matters worse -he was sme to refuse and then reemphasize his orders and redouble his vigilance. To ask the consent of the officer of the day or the conflyance of the officer of the guard was to invite them to court arrest and trial en their own account. He couldn't do that even to oblige a brother Delt. It only Nedt'raven were officer of the guard some thing might be done- he was a college man, too, and though not a "Delt," but rather of a rival set, he "would under stand" and possibly help. Amard mount was held toward dusk, and that was four hours away, at least. The prisoner's note and tone were urgent. An bleu occurred to Itilly: What if he could get Gordon to let him "go on" this very evening? It wasn't his tour. He had "marched off" only two days before, as he well remembered, tort anker "had roughed" him up and down about that Ilttie error in copying the list of prisoners from the report of the preious day. Marcaver, he had counted on going to town right after "retreat," dining at the Palace, an extravagance not to be thought of at other times, so as to be on hand when the Primes and Amy Lawrence came down to dinner. He had planned it ail-even to the amount of surprise he was to exhibit when he should discover about when he had linished his own dinner that they were just beginning theirs, and the extent and degree of pieasurable emotion he might venture on showing as he hastened over to great them. and accepted their offer to be sented with them, even if he had been so unkind as to dine beforehand, instead of with them. He had set his heart on having a chat with Miss Lawrence at part recompense for all he had lost that morning, and all this he was thinkof while still fumbling over that disturbing note. Time was getting short. too; there was no telling how much longer they might stay. Mr. Prime had brought his only daughter all that long journey across the continent on the assurrace that the boy he loved. with whom he had quarreled, and whom, in his anger, he had sorely rebuked, had enlisted there in San Franclaco and was serving in a regiment at the great camp west of the city. He had come full of hope and confidence; he had found the young soldier drscribed, and, in his bitter disappointment, he declared there was no resemblence to justify the report sent him by the boy's own uncle, who yourd he had met blm with comrades on the malu street of the city, that the recognition was mutual, for the boy had durted around the first corner and escappiparagraphs of army regulations, was His compenions were scattered by the time Mr. Lawrence turned to the spot, after a brief, fruitless search, but private detectives had taken it up and "iocated" young Prime aml telegraphed the lather in the distant east. Now, Mr. Lawrence was away on business of his own. Written assurances that he couldn't be mistaken lost weight, and Mr. Prime, disheartened, was merely walting the report of an agent who thought he had traced the boy to Tampa. In 21 hours he might spirit bls daughter awny on unother chase, and then there would be no further warrant for Miss Lawrence's retagining in the city. She would return to her jovely home in one of the loveliest of California valleys, miles away from the raw fogs and chills of the Golden Gate, and would be no more seen among the camps. It told Morton of the colonel's orders, issued that very day, and bade him be putient—he hoped and believed opportunity would be afforded for an Interview that evening. Then he hunted up a subaitern of his own grade whom he knew would probably be the drail for officer-of-the-guard that evening. "Brooke," he said, "will you swap tours with me if Gordon's willing?"

"Think not, sir. Supplies limited. Officer of the day reported half an hour ago every set was in use. "Not unless you're suffering for another snub. That man loves to say no as much as any girl I ever usked, and he doesn't do it to be coaxed, cither. Best ience it nione, Billy."

And then the unexpected happened. Into the tent, with a quick, impetnous step, came the commanding officer bluself, and something had occurred to stir that gentleman to the core. His eyes were snapping and his head was high.

"Mr. Gordon," said he, "here's more of this pilfering business, and now they're beginning to find out at isn't all in my camp by a damnel sight. I want that letter copled uto wee." edgewise position of the rock, all the love. rainfall penetrates the earth, instead of running off in branches. It is a peculiar sight to see rast areas of land without a single rivulet, and without any visible outlet for the water. Large caverns and caves are formed in this upturned strata and as the water found its way downward it carried the surface earth down, forming a great many sinks. In some of which, sink holes are yet found openiag into caverns below. The only streams of water in that section are the creeks formed by large springs spring flows from the hills a dam is made of boards about three feet long set on end. The wuter held by this dam is led a few rods through a square trough about one foot wide, to a little over-shot wheel, which runs the lathe of an old time chair factory. Thus in the very insufficiency of the creek it is taught to make itself useful. From there it travels about a mile, being increused in volnme and power by other gushing springs. It then enters a larger race, about two feet wide and three inches deep, and comes in contact with a twenty-foot over shot wheel with a three foot face. This wheel has the honor of running a pair of thirty-inch corn buhrs. The water is hardly rested from this arduous task, when it is again inclined into a race and is harnessed to a sixteen-foot wheel with a thirty-eight-inch face, which runs to the volume of water, the creek asany person be so useful to a comannity? The corn and wheat is carried to these aills on horses, the roads being better adapted to that mode of traveling. The boys usually ride on the sacks, but sometimes the family has no mill-boy, then the maa of the house goes; if he is too busy, his wife or daughter goes to aill. While in that valley time rolled backward almost half a century, and I became a mill-boy again, seated oa a sack of eorn which rested on a sack of wheat, on the back of one of their cutting wood in front of the mill. I left tho tura of cora and went to the Kentucky. roller mill. Upon returning the real miller was there. It was the "sometimes" miller's wife.
